Dinosaur Days

WRITTEN BY JUDY NAYER

ILLUSTRATED BY GAIL PIAZZA

Paul and Dawn were twins. In some ways, they were very different. They didn't even look alike.

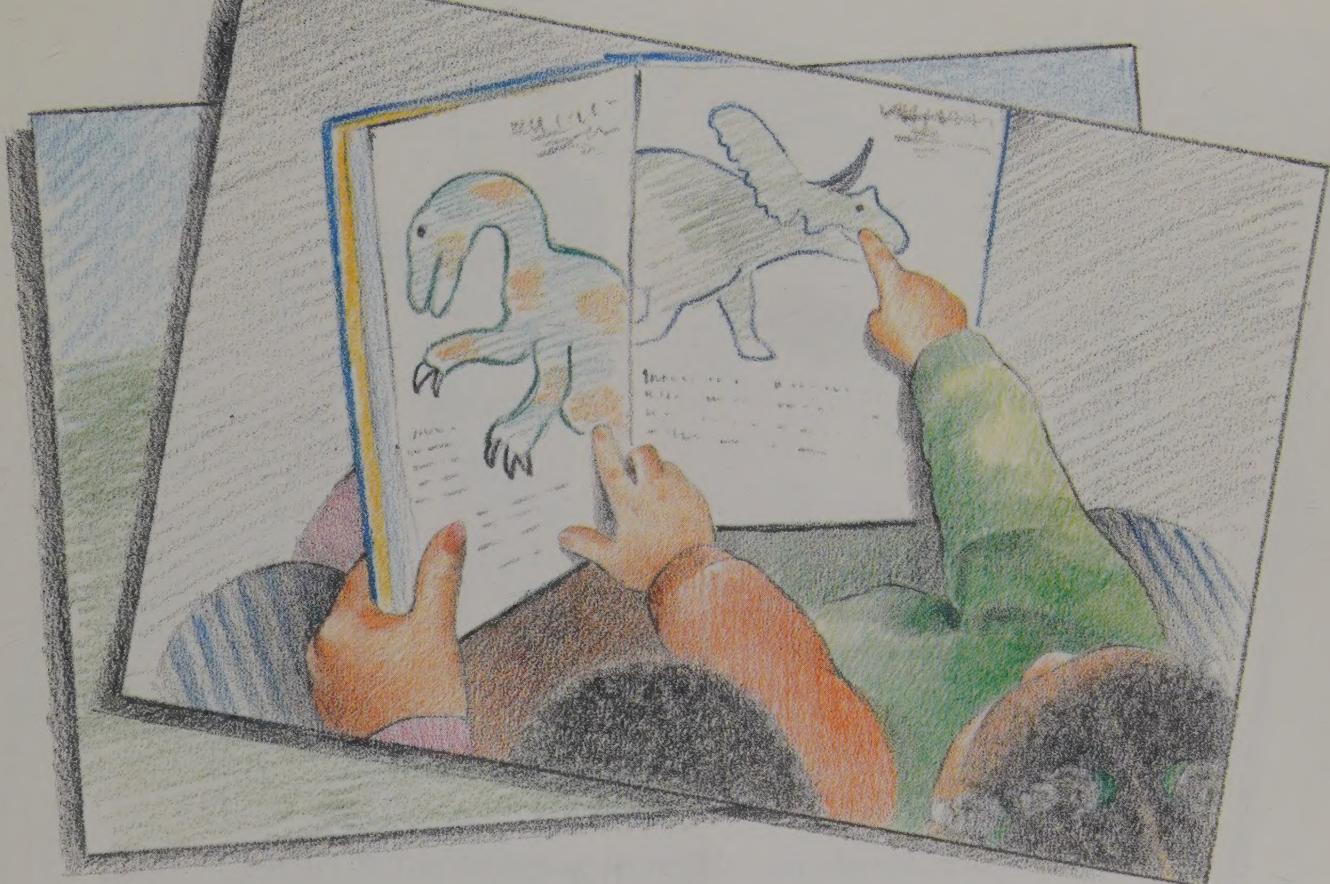

But in one way, they were just the same. They both LOVED dinosaurs!

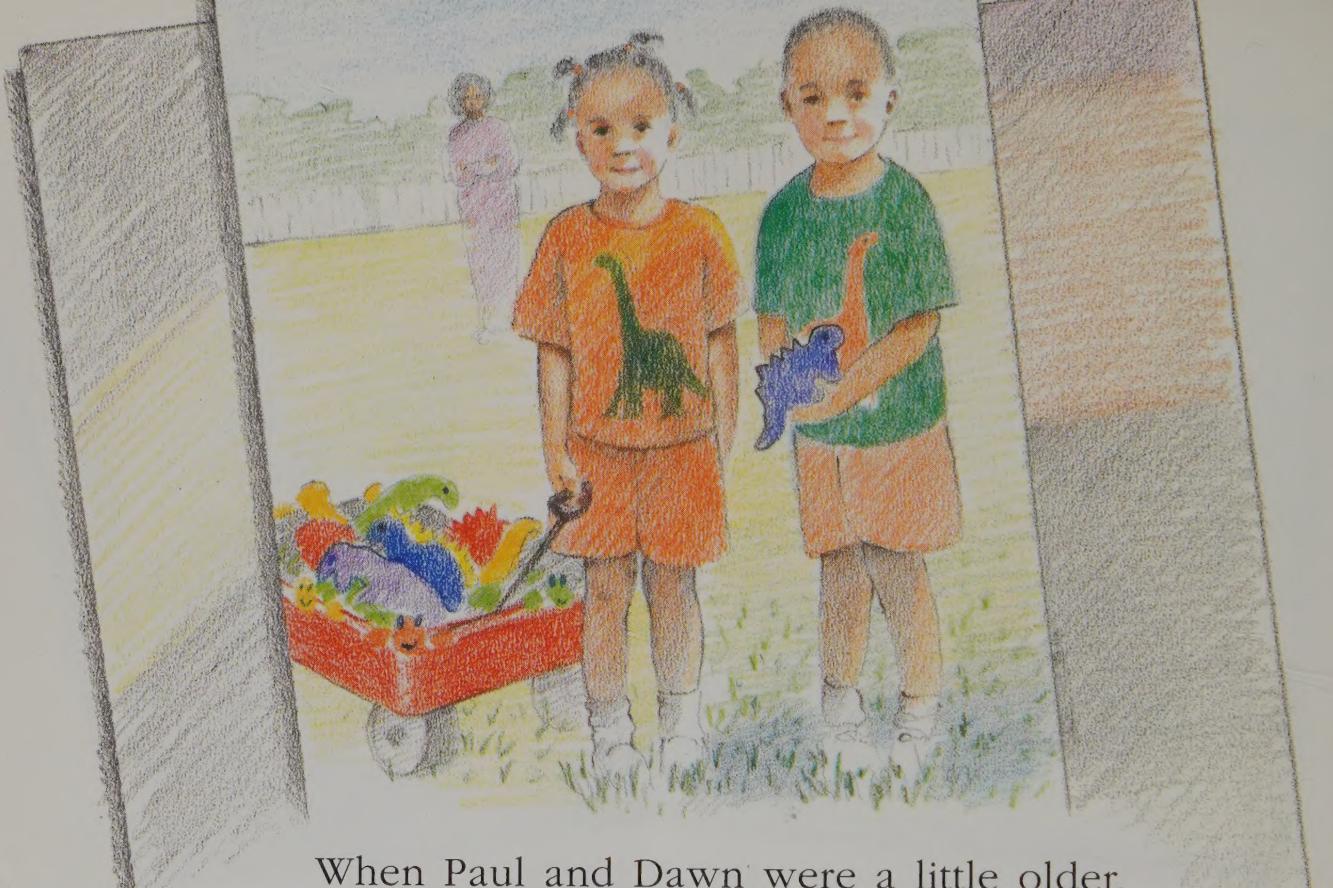

When Paul and Dawn started to crawl, Mom put their dinosaurs around the house. Paul and Dawn would crawl around looking for them.

When Paul and Dawn were bigger, they saw pictures of dinosaurs in books. Paul and Dawn would point to every dinosaur they saw.

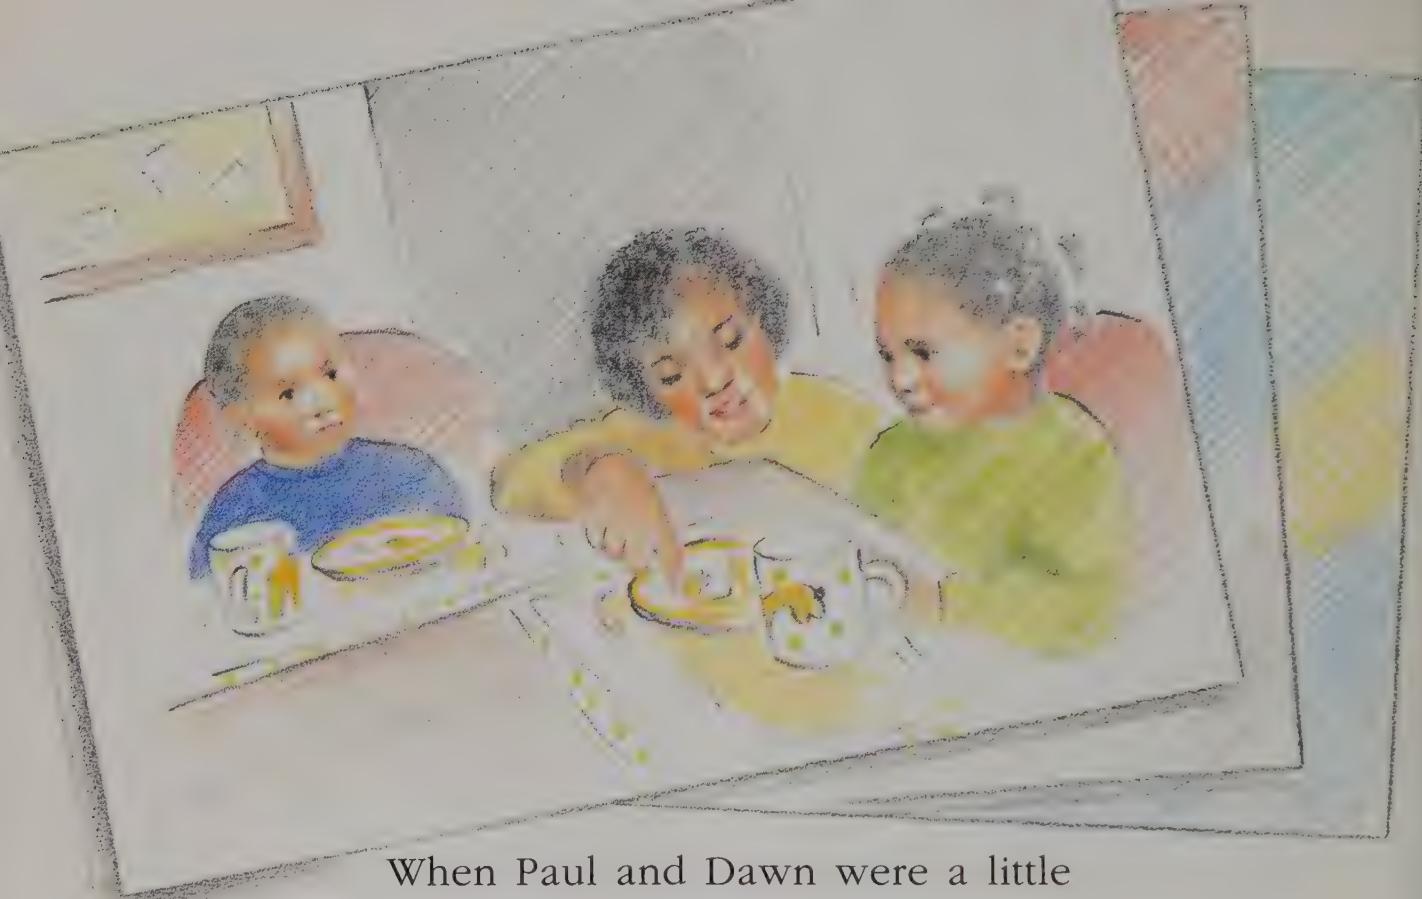

Dawn saw a dinosaur with a big jaw. Paul saw a dinosaur with long claws.

When Paul and Dawn were a little older,
they used a wagon to haul their dinosaurs. They would haul their dinosaurs around the lawn.

When Mom saw the twins yawn, she put them to bed. They took their dinosaurs with them.

When Paul and Dawn were a little older, Mom taught them some dinosaur names. Tyrannosaurus rex was their favorite.

They taught each other new dinosaur names.

“Paul-osaurus!”

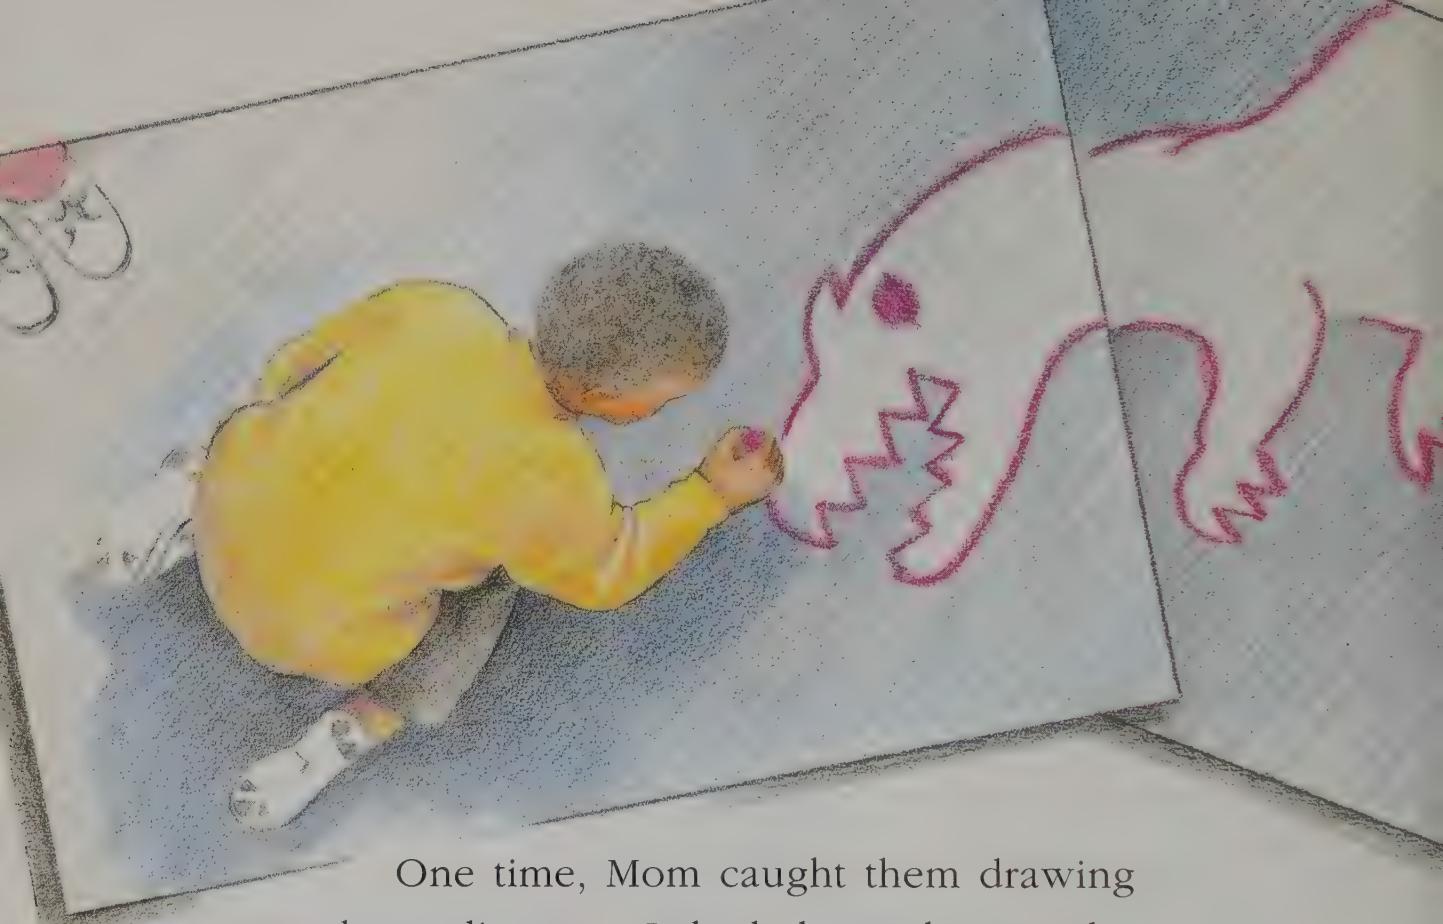

“Dawn-osaurus!”

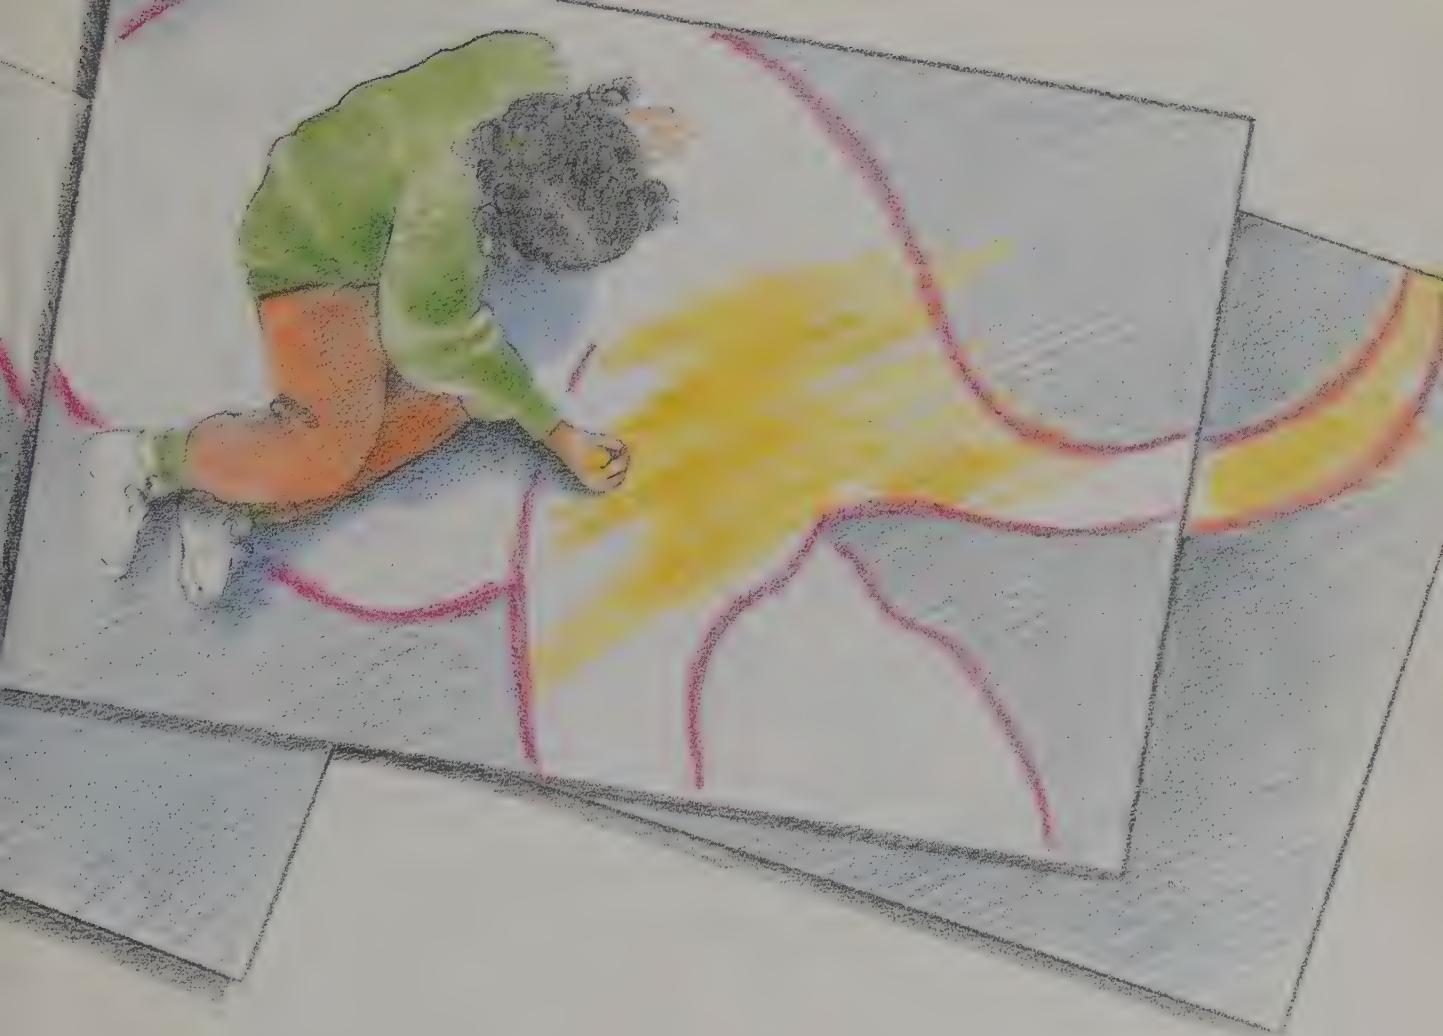

When Paul and Dawn were a little older,
they would draw dinosaur pictures.

They taught themselves to draw many kinds of dinosaurs.

One time, Mom caught them drawing a huge dinosaur. It had sharp claws and a long jaw.

When Paul and Dawn were a little older,
Mom taught them how to find their own dinosaur books.

They saw books about many kinds of dinosaurs.

On Saturdays, Mom took them to see the dinosaurs. Paul liked to look at the big dinosaur. Dawn liked to look at the real dinosaur bones.

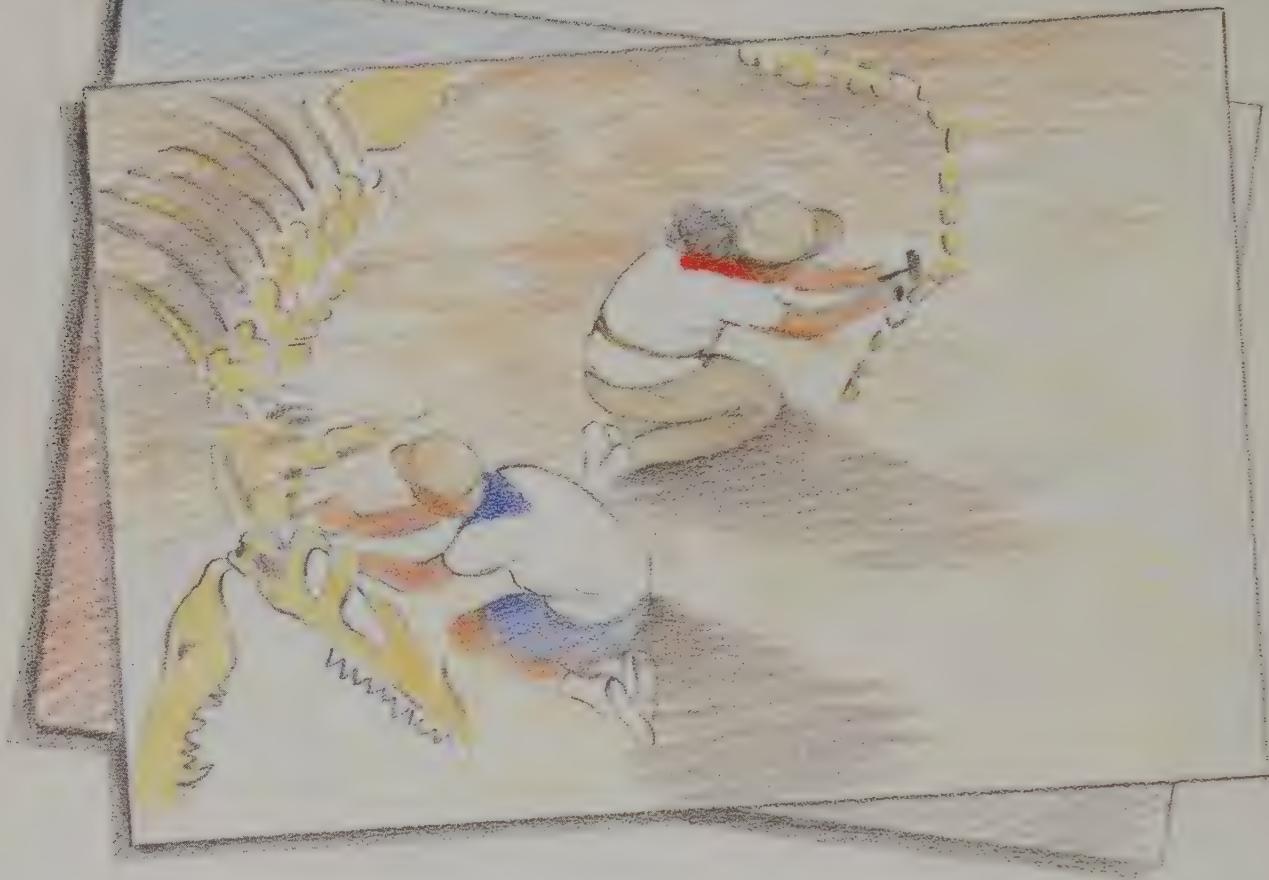

They even saw a dinosaur they could crawl on. They crawled up, and Mom took their picture.

In school, their teacher taught them more about dinosaurs. They made a dinosaur from a kit.

The class talked about what causes people to think about dinosaurs so much.

Now Paul and Dawn are grown up, but they still crawl around looking for dinosaurs.

Now they find real dinosaur bones, but they still haul them in a wagon. And they still draw dinosaur pictures.

They both still LOVE dinosaurs!
